

Boat lovers need not get their feet wet

WHEN the Brisbane International Boat Show sails into town each year, Moreton Bay plays host to some of the world's newest nautical innovations.

This year was no different with one of the world's first amphibious boats, staying on a few extra days to show Queenslanders the benefit of a boat with wheels.

The vehicle is bound to draw stares from those on the beach and be the source of envy for those who are wet and worn out from putting the boat in the water by winch.

Director of Sealegs Marine Craft, Will Burrell, said the beauty of the New Zealand invention is those who love boating will never have to get their feet wet.

The boat drives into the water like a car out of a driveway.

"If grandad felt his boating days are over he could get about 10 more years boating," he said.

"I think it's perfect for those people who live on the water because they can just drive it across the garden, into the beach and straight into the water."

Although there is certainly an element of novelty value attached to the craft it is still very capable, having slashed the world record by an amphibious vehicle for the crossing of the English Channel to just 43 minutes, previously set by Sir Richard Branson.

The 5.6m boat is worth more than $79,000.
